This important event grows year by year and has now become embedded annually in third-sector organisations, local authorities, and police communications, informing not just the awareness day but regular communications plans throughout the year. These efforts help ensure a consistent and unified message in the ongoing fight against exploitation.

Additionally, we promote our national "Say Something If You See Something" campaign, empowering communities to speak out and take action if they witness exploitation, helping to create a culture of vigilance and proactive intervention.

Join us in raising awareness and making a lasting impact in your community.
